Centennial Day, set apart for the supreme expression of the nation's jubilee anniversary. dawned brightly on the great metropolis. There was a bracing coolness about the early morning air and a stiff breeze caused the bunt-ing to swell proudly out as if rejoicing in the coming military pageant.

Martial music, the tramp of disciplined hosts and the waving of flags and banners were ever present. It was distinctively a military day, as yesterday was the naval day and to-morrow will be the day of civic celebration.

Every citizen seemed to be for the nonce a soldier and patriotism took on a warlike aspect.

THE WHOLE TOWN UP AND ABOUT. In expectation of witnessing a military pageant, the like of which has never before been seen in America, the whole town was up and about at an unusually early hour.

The day's proceedings opened with the firing of the great artillery salute. The boom of the cannon could be heard nearly all over the city. About 6 A. M. the great throng of visitors began to move. Quiet uptown streets, upon which a soul is seldom seen at that hour, were alive with strangers walking towards the various

The traffic on the various roads was even beavier than during the morning hours yesterday, but more trains had been put on. The greatest crush to-day was on the Sixth and Third avenue lines. Every available car and engine of the Com-pany's rolling stock was utilized.

Elevated stations.

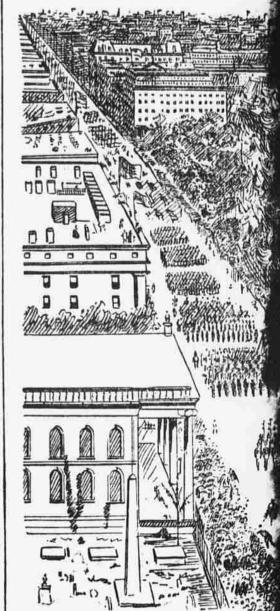

POURING DOWNTOWN. Up to 9 A. M. the crowd poured downtown to the ricinity of the Post-Office and spread itself down along Broadway to Wall street, and thence down to the neighborhood of the Sub-Treasury building, where were the literary exercises. A GREAT MASS OF PROPLE. When the party left the church, the streets. except immediately in front of St. Paul's, which the police kept clear, were hidden under thousands of people. The windows in the houses as far as eye could reach were choked with people, and for the mo-ment while the President of the United States

President Cleveland also received an ovation. His name was shouted, cheered, hand clapped until the torrent of applause made him half rise in his seat in his carriage and bow his acknowledgments.

President Harrison recognized his reception by lifting his silk hat repeatedly.

The carriage rolled rapidly down Broadway to Pine street, through which they went to the Treasury. It was 10, 20 a. m. when they turned into Pine street from Broadway. Inspector Williams and Capt McLaughlin were in charge of the police at the corner of Pine and Broadway, where Gen Schofield sat on a black charger at the head of his troops.

PASSING THROUGH THE LINE OF PARADE. After the literary exercises were concluded President Harrison and his party partock of luncheon in the Sub-Treasury building. The crowd rushed around through Nassau and William streets only to be shoved back by a force of police under the immedeiate control of Inspector Williams. Twenty minutes later the President and party came out. It was a source of wonderment as to how he was to get to the reviewing stand, but this was neatly arranged. Aides were at once sent along the whole line. The troops halted, formed into squads four deep and front faced on the righthand side of Broadway.

Then the President and party, preceded by mounted police, went through on the left-hand side of the thoroughfare. He received an immense ovation all along the line. The troops then went back of the original marching column and resumed their tramp uptown. Long before the marching columns had everything started the reviewing stand at Madison Square. of march the Aldermanic stand on the reservoir at Forty-second street, and the big stand at Waverley place, were surrounded by the mob. THE PREE STANDS FILLED IN A JIFFY. The huge free stand at Union Square was filled as quick as a cup of coffee could be poured out hours before the time for the procession to start An Evening World reporter traversed the line of march before 0.30 a. M., and the crowd was then packed as tight almost as it possibly to the packed as tight almost could be, although afterwards it was increased almost as much again. A GREAT DAY FOR LUNCHMEN. It was a great day for the peddiers and the

In and out, like worms, through the crowd they moved, yelling their wares in every possible pitch of voice.

A MULTITUDE OF PRIVATE STANDS. Never before at any parade have there been so many private stands erected along the way. You cannot imagine it unless you were out to-day. The stands embraced every conceivable kind of a structure from an aged ash-barrel turned end up to stands that run up to the second story, like the state in a circus. GRAND DECOBATIONS. The decorations were grand. The rain last week speiled a great many because they were of cheap material, but such were replaced with the best stuff and most elaborate designs that oney could procure. The people felt a little mortified that our guests should have seen the red, white and blue run together because of a little rain, and they walked to his carriage there was a silence and quiet that could scarcely be comprehended when court again.
